Biography

The duo consists of brothers Greg and Bob Buckner. Greg was born in 1948 and Bob in 1950 in Buckhorn, Kentucky. The brothers grew up in a musical family and began performing together as teenagers. In the early 1970s, they formed the Buckhorn Brothers band, which initially included other members. However, by 1976, the band had evolved into the duo of Greg and Bob.

Gabe the Buckhorn Brothers released their debut album, "Buckhorn Brothers", in 1977. The album was a critical and commercial success, and it established the duo as one of the leading lights of the American folk music revival. Over the years, they have released numerous albums, including "Live at " (1979), "Buckhorn Brothers Live" (1981), "Sings the Songs of Bob Dylan" (1983), and "The Road Home" (2003).

Music

Gabe the Buckhorn Brothers' music is known for its eclecticism, blending elements of folk, bluegrass, blues, and gospel. Their songs often feature intricate harmonies, driving rhythms, and thought-provoking lyrics. The brothers are also known for their instrumental prowess, with Greg playing guitar and banjo and Bob playing mandolin and fiddle.

Some of their most popular songs include "The Ballad of Ira Hayes", "Way Down Yonder in the Paw Paw Patch", "Shady Grove", and "Will the Circle Be Unbroken". Their music has been praised for its authenticity, its emotional depth, and its ability to connect with audiences of all ages.

Storytelling

In addition to their music, Gabe the Buckhorn Brothers are also known for their storytelling. Their live performances often include humorous anecdotes, tall tales, and personal stories. The brothers have a knack for connecting with their audience on a personal level, and their stories often leave listeners laughing, crying, and thinking.

The brothers' storytelling is rooted in the oral tradition of Appalachian storytelling. They often draw upon their own experiences, as well as stories passed down from their family and community. Their stories are full of wit, wisdom, and a deep love for the human condition.

Impact

Gabe the Buckhorn Brothers have had a significant impact on the folk music scene. They have inspired a generation of musicians and helped to popularize American roots music. Their music has been featured in films, television shows, and documentaries, and they have performed at prestigious venues around the world.

The brothers have also been recognized for their contributions to music. In 2003, they were inducted into the Kentucky Music Hall of Fame. In 2011, they received the National Heritage Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts, the highest honor that can be bestowed on a traditional artist in the United States.

Gabe the Buckhorn Brothers are a true American treasure. For over four decades, they have been entertaining audiences with their unique blend of music, storytelling, and humor. Their music is timeless, their stories are powerful, and their impact on the folk music scene is undeniable. They are a living testament to the power of music to connect people, inspire creativity, and make the world a better place.
