- Size: New drivers should choose a car that is small and easy to maneuver. This will make it easier to learn the basics of driving and to avoid accidents.

- Safety: The car should have good safety features, such as airbags, anti-lock brakes, and stability control. These features can help protect the driver and passengers in the event of an accident.
- Reliability: The car should be reliable and not prone to breakdowns. This will help ensure that the new driver can get to their destination safely and on time.

Once you have chosen the right car, it's time to get a driver's license. The requirements for getting a driver's license vary from state to state, but in general, you will need to:

- Be at least 16 years old
- Pass a written test
- Pass a road test

In some states, you may also need to complete a driver's education course. This course will teach you the basics of driving and help you prepare for the written and road tests.

Once you have your driver's license, it's time to learn the basics of driving. This includes learning how to:

- Start and stop the car
- Steer the car
- Use the accelerator and brake pedals
- Shift gears
- Park the car

You can learn the basics of driving by taking driver's education courses, practicing with a friend or family member, or taking lessons from a driving instructor.

Once you have mastered the basics of driving, you may want to learn some more advanced driving techniques. These techniques can help you improve your driving skills and make you a safer driver.

Some advanced driving techniques include:

- Defensive driving: Defensive driving is a set of techniques that can help you avoid accidents. These techniques include being aware of your surroundings, anticipating the actions of other drivers, and taking evasive action if necessary.
- Skid control: Skid control is a technique that can help you regain control of your car if it starts to skid.
- Parallel parking: Parallel parking is a technique that can help you park your car in tight spaces.

You can learn advanced driving techniques by taking a driving course, reading books or articles, or practicing on your own.

It is important to perform regular maintenance on your car to keep it running safely and efficiently. Some basic car maintenance tasks that you should perform include:

- Checking the oil level
- Changing the oil and filter

- Checking the tire pressure
- Rotating the tires
- Replacing the brake pads
- Getting a tune-up

You can perform some car maintenance tasks yourself, but others should be left to a mechanic. If you are not sure how to perform a particular task, consult your car's owner's manual or a mechanic.

Driving safety is a top priority for all drivers, but it is especially important for new drivers. There are a number of things that new drivers can do to stay safe on the road, including:

- Always wear your seat belt. Seat belts are the most effective way to prevent serious injuries in the event of an accident.
- Don't drink and drive. Even a small amount of alcohol can impair your driving skills.
- Don't text and drive. Texting while driving is just as dangerous as drunk driving.
- Be aware of your surroundings. Pay attention to the traffic around you and be prepared to react to unexpected events.
- Drive defensively. Anticipate the actions of other drivers and take evasive action if necessary.

Even the most experienced drivers can find themselves in an emergency situation at some point. If you are involved in an accident or witness an accident, it is important to know what to do.

In case of an accident, you should:

- Pull over to the side of the road.
- Turn on your hazard lights.
- Check to see if anyone is injured.
- Call the police.
- Exchange insurance information with the other driver(s).

If you witness an accident, you should:

- Pull over to the side of the road.
- Turn on your hazard lights.
- Check to see if anyone is injured.
- Call the police.
- Stay at the scene until the police arrive.

By following these tips, new drivers can help reduce their risk of being involved in an accident and stay safe on the road.
