Personal Space in the Airplane Cabin

The airplane cabin can be a tight fit, so it's important to be mindful of your personal space. Avoid sprawling out into your neighbor's seat, and keep your belongings, including elbows and knees, within your designated space. If you need to adjust your seat, do so slowly and carefully to avoid hitting the person behind you.

Etiquette for Seat Mates on an Airplane

Your seat mate can make or break your flight experience. Introduce yourself politely, and ask them if they prefer the window or aisle seat. If you're next to a talkative person, engage in conversation, but be respectful if they're trying to sleep or work. If you need to get up frequently, try to choose an aisle seat or ask your seat mate to let you pass when necessary.

Carry-On Luggage Etiquette in the Airplane Cabin

Carry-on luggage can be a nuisance if it's not handled properly. Make sure your carry-on meets the airline's size and weight restrictions, and place it in the overhead bin carefully to avoid hitting other passengers. If the overhead bin is full, ask a flight attendant for assistance. Do not place your carry-on under the seat in front of you, as this can restrict legroom for your seat mate.

Airplane Restroom Etiquette for Travelers

The airplane restroom is a small space, so it's important to be courteous to other users. Queue quietly and wait your turn. Avoid monopolizing the restroom, and leave it clean and tidy for the next person. If there's a line, be prepared to wait your turn. Never enter an occupied restroom or use it as a changing room.

Other Important Airplane Etiquette Rules

In addition to the specific etiquette tips mentioned above, here are some general guidelines to follow for a pleasant flight experience:

- Be on time for your flight, and arrive at the gate early to avoid any last-minute stress.

- Follow the instructions of the flight attendants, and fasten your seatbelt during takeoff, landing, and turbulence.
- Avoid loud or disruptive behavior, and refrain from talking excessively or arguing with fellow passengers.
- Be considerate of others and avoid using offensive language or gestures.
- If you need assistance with anything, don't hesitate to ask a flight attendant for help.

Breaking Plane Etiquette: What Not to Do on an Airplane

To help you avoid common etiquette pitfalls, here's a list of things you should never do on a plane:

- Do not recline your seat without warning the person behind you.
- Do not put your feet on the seat in front of you.
- Do not hog the armrests.
- Do not change your baby's diaper on the seat or in the aisle.
- Do not use electronic devices without headphones.

By following these simple tips, you can help create a more enjoyable and respectful flight experience for everyone. Happy flying!

10 AIRPLANE ETIQUETTE RULES

1. Respect the lavatory.

Don't take a lot of time, and don't make a mess. For your own health, please don't try to join the Mile High Club — those restrooms can be filthy!

2. Consider your odor.

Keep in mind that overly strong cologne or perfume can be as unpleasant as BO in close quarters. And if you're picking up food before your flight, stick to something that doesn't emit too much of a scent.

3. Keep your children in check.

Parents, you may be distracted, but they are your responsibility. For passengers with complaints: Talk to the parents — don't scold the kid. It's not your place to correct the behavior of a stranger's child, and you'll likely annoy the only people who can stop the kicking of your seat.

4. Think about how you choose to sleep.

You may want to use the neck pillow to avoid winding up spaghetti on your neighbor's shoulder. If you're in a middle or aisle seat, avoid using the tray table as a headrest, so your neighbor can get through without waking you up.

5. Middle seat gets the armrests.

Unlike the passengers in the aisle or window seat, whoever is in the middle seat has no room to stretch his or her feet or rest his or her head. You can also help provide the middle passenger some mental space by not forcing him or her into conversation.

6. Get up only at convenient times.

Think ahead when planning your bathroom breaks. If you see a flight attendant with a cart in the aisle, stay put. It also goes without saying that getting up before the dinner trays have been collected is taboo.

7. Don't hog the overhead bin.

In the era of checked-bag fees, carry-on space is at a premium. Don't take up someone else's space by putting your bag in the bin horizontally, and if you have two bags, keep the smaller one at your feet.

8. If you must recline, do it carefully.

Look behind you before reclining, and consider warning the fellow traveler who's next to you — about to invade so that person can hang onto his or her drink or adjust his or her laptop. And stay upright during meals.

9. Don't get hammered.

Having a few drinks is a fine way to pass the time, but keep yourself in check. You could possibly annoy everyone around you, reeking of booze and needing to get up to use the lavatory every 20 minutes.

10. Be kind to the flight attendants.

Flight attendants don't create the rules about stowing tray tables, wearing seat belts, and restoring seatbacks before landing. Giving them a hard time is obvious and can delay your takeoff.
